THE "HECTOR" VOYAGE

From Scotland's rugged northern slopes,
From mountainside and glen,
Upborne by ardent "New-World" hopes,
Trooped down the "Hector" men.
And as their vessel stood to sea,
On voyage strange and long,
"God of our fathers our God be,"
They sang the grand old song.

For weary weeks the "Hector" braved Atlantic's surges high:
The winds and waves around her raved,
They heard no wail or sigh.
"O spread Thy covering wings around,"
They breathed in faith and peace,
Until we pass the ocean's bound
"And all our wand'rings cease."

They prayed amid the tempest's strife,
When death stood by their side,
"Through each perplexing path of life
Our wand'ring footsteps guide."
When seized by famine, cold and dread,
In anguished faith they cried,
"Give us each day our daily bread
And raiment fit provide."

Their fathers' God inclined His ear,—
Their fears and dangers past,
Upon a day of presage clear
They entered port at last;
And knelt on Pictou's favored sod
To vow, as oft before,
That He should be their "chosen God
And portion evermore."

HISTORICAL STATEMENT

(By Judge Patterson)

On the 15th of September, 1773, the ship "Hector" landed at Pictou, Nova Scotia, nearly two hundred Scottish settlers—thirty-three families and twenty-five unmarried men. Her arrival marks the beginning of Scottish Immigration to Canada, and it is proposed this year on the 150th anniversary to have an appropriate national celebration. For climatic reasons the date has been advanced to July 15th.

Of course there were some men of Scottish nationality in Canada before that time—a Highland regiment had been disbanded at Quebec upon the signing of the Treaty of Paris in 1763, and their descendants are in that Province today. Indeed, one or two ships, notably the "Alexander" to Charlottetown in 1772 had earlier brought Scottish immigrants to Prince Edward Island. But the coming of these had nothing to do with any ship that had gone before or that came after. Some of these immigrants had been driven out by the fires of religious persecution. All of them came as tenants merely, and had still for many, many years to pay rent—they still had the dread of eviction hanging over them, and naturally made no effort to induce others in the old land to follow them, and none apparently did follow them. It was thirty-one years after 1772 before another ship with Scottish immigrants landed at Charlottetown. But the Hector's passengers came of their own free will under no compulsion whatever, to settle not on land of another, but on their own, and never after knew landlord or factor. As quickly as the indifferent means of communication of those days would permit, they spread the gospel of land rent free among their kinsmen at home who made haste to join them. The "Hector" was thus the pioneer ship of a great movement—she was the "Mayflower" of Canada. She opened the gates for that flood of Scottish immigration that, interrupted but not stopped by the War of the American Revolution, poured into Canada with growing force for more than two score of years. Before it ebbed the whole of Pictou and Antigonish Counties and Western Cape Breton and many other parts of Nova Scotia, the larger part of the Province of Prince Edward Island and large portions of New Brunswick and Ontario had been settled.

The year 1773 was the fateful year when the East India tea was dumped into Boston Harbor. There were men on the "Hector" who had been "out" with Prince Charlie. The great majority of them were not allowed to speak their native tongue or wear their native garb, yet while during the American War there was dissatisfaction in Halifax, sedition in Lunenburg, open rebellion in Cumberland and not enough men in Colchester who would take the oath of allegiance to constitute a Grand Jury, the Highlanders of Pictou never wavered—they were loyal to a man. "True as the dial to the sun, although it be not shined upon."

In 1774, that is the very next year after the "Hector", fifteen families of the best blood of the Lowlands came to Pictou. During the war of the American Revolution there was no actual addition to the Scots in Nova Scotia, though attempts were made to send other settlers out—attempts that were frustrated by the action of the Home Government. At the close of that war, however, a Scottish regiment, the 82nd, then on garrison duty at Halifax, was there disbanded. The soldiers insisted on joining their kinsmen in Pictou and though strenuous efforts were made to induce them to choose their land elsewhere, more than one hundred and fifty of them came to Pictou and Antigonish. There, next year they were joined by sixty odd members of the second battalion of the 84th, or Royal Highland Immigrant Regiment, with their families—the remainder of the battalion going to Douglas in Hants County where a few of the "Hector" passengers had previously settled. Direct immigration was resumed in 1784 and continued in 1785, '86 and '87, but no large body came until '87. Until that time, most of the immigrants had been from the Highlands and had been induced to come by the representations of land rent free made to them by their compatriots. In the "Hector", however, there were three families and five unmarried men from the Lowlands. These too had been making representations to their friends which resulted in bringing to Nova Scotia through Pictou a large number of immigrants from Dumfries and Kirkcudbright in 1788 and 1789. In 1791 two vessels arrived loaded with immigrants from the Western Islands of Scotland—Catholics, who after a winter in Pictou, eventually took up their land in Antigonish and Cape Breton. Every year thereafter saw two, sometimes three, vessels come filled to overflowing—as one writer says "only the bed-ridden were left behind." In 1801 for instance, as many as 1300 souls were landed in Pictou, many of whom went to Antigonish and Cape Breton. In 1802, one vessel brought 370, all from the Island of Barra, (the ancestral home of the McNeils) all of whom went to Cape Breton, and there are more McNeils today in one polling section of Victoria County, Cape Breton, than there are in the whole Island of Barra. One thousand were expected in 1803, and it is certain 845 arrived. Nor were the numbers less in the years that followed, and so long as the stream continued it poured through Pictou, following in the Hector's wake. The most desirable lands around Pictou had long since been granted, and most of these latter immigrants made their way to Prince Edward Island, Antigonish, Cape Breton, Guysboro and Colchester counties and other parts of Nova Scotia. For example all or nearly all the passengers of one of the vessels coming in 1804 went to Wallace, Cumberland County, N. S. Between 1802 and 1827, 25,000 went to Cape Breton alone. A number far from negligible stood not upon the order of their going until they reached North Western New Brunswick and many even went to Ontario. It would be too much to say that none of these would have come to Canada had not the "Hector" led the way, but certainly very many of them would not have come and the coming of others would have been greatly delayed.

Without disparagement of or reflection upon the immigrants of other nationalities it can be confidently stated that none has contributed so much to the upbuilding of the Maritime Provinces as the Scottish. Take the matter of education alone. The passengers on the "Hector" brought their school teacher with them. Their kith and kin coming later followed their example. And these teachers were not ordinary men—one was a graduate of Aberdeen University, another of Edinburgh. A third was the father of Simon Newcombe, the greatest astronomer America has yet produced. And they were not long satisfied with a primary education alone. They started a College—to avoid jealousy they called it an Academy, "open to all youths no matter to what mode of faith or worship they were attached," and in the fights over that College the reformers bared their arms and fleshed their swords for the battle for Responsible Government. It is not too much to say that Free Schools and Responsible Government came to Nova Scotia with the coming of the Scottish immigrants.

A CALL TO THE CLANSMEN

Hae ye ever heard of Pictou, fair Pictou
by the Sea,
Where the Scotchman eats his parritch
and taes his cup o' tea?
He aye minds the Catechism and he
loves a braw, big fight,
But ye must not reprimand him, for a Scotchman's always right.

Hae ye heard of the Ship Hector that sailed the stormy sea,
With a company of brave Scotchmen,
the finest that could be?
A hundred and fifty years ago they landed on our shore
And thanked the Lord devoutly that their troubles all were o'er.

Ay, but they worked their hardest; ay,
but they tolled and prayed;
And they taught their children wisely,
and strong foundations laid
For character the finest; for strength in
brawn and brain;
A goodly heritage they left; Who follows in their train?

Come, Scotchmen, then, where'er ye be,
come join right merrily
In the Hector Celebration, down in Pictou by the Sea,
Bring the wee uns and the wife, and
share in all we do
To honor these brave sires of old, our kinsmen staunch and true.

—Jean Gordon Forbes.

The following inscription, in English and Gaelic, is cast in bronze and insert in the pedestal of the monument as shown above, to be unveiled on the square at Pictou on Tuesday, July 17th at 2 p.m., by His Excellency Baron Byng, Governor-General.

1773-1923

In proud commemoration of the courage, faith and endurance of those gallant pioneers, passengers on the ship "Hector", who reached Pictou, September fifteen, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy Three, vanguard of that army of Scottish Immigrants whose intellectual ideals, moral worth and material achievement have contributed greatly to the good government and upbuilding of Canada.

Erected in 1923 and given into the perpetual care of the Town of Pictou by St. Andrew's Society of New Glasgow.

"God of our Fathers be the God of their succeeding race."
